The “So You Want to Sing” Series

A Partnership between NATS and Rowman & Littlefield

So You Want to Sing is a series of works devoted to providing a complete survey of what it means to sing within a particular genre. Each contribution functions as a touchstone work for not only professional singers, but students and teachers of singing. Titles in the series offer a common set of topics so readers can navigate easily the various genres addressed in each volume. This series is produced under the direction of the National Association of Teachers of Singing (NATS), the leading professional organization devoted to the science and art of singing.

Each volume is written by a professional singing teacher (or set of professionals) and is dedicated to a specific style of singing. As of June 2018, twelve books in the series have been released with six additional releases scheduled by 2020. Proposals are accepted on a rolling basis for new titles in the series.
